faculty or function which we do not employ. We can have just what we use and that will constantly increase. Everything else will be gradually taken away from us. Man becomes strong portion to the extent and healthfulness of the activity of his faculties, and it must not be one sided, not an exercise of one or two faculties or one set of faculties, or the man will topple over. Balance in life comes from the healthful exercise of all the faculties. One reason why we have so many one sided men in this country is because they pursue one idea, exercise one side of their nature, and of course is one of the curses of specialties. They are a good thing for the race. but death to the individual who pursues his specialty at the expense of the development of the all around man.-O. S. Marden in Success Magazine.

Needed No Introduction.

"It pays sometimes to know a little of the family history of your clients, said a business woman the other day "It would have saved me from making a blunder if I had known the relations that formerly existed between two men who met in my office. Their business was practically of the same na ture, and as I was obliged to leave them together for a few minutes while I attended to some telephone calls I thought it would be more agreeable if I introduced them. They responded rather stiffly, but I put that down to temperament and went into my inner an hour later the younger man dispatched his business as quickly as pos sible and got out. The other said:

"'I was not aware that you were acquainted with my ex-brother-in-law." "'Brother-in-law?' I asked stupidly. "Yes. My sister got a divorce from him last summer." -- Brooklyn Eagle.

Schools In France. The French system of education is intensely national. Its plan is exactly the opposite from our own school system. With us the local community controls primary schools. In France the local community has no voice in the matter. The French system is the most centralized, the most strictly regulated, the most autocratic and the farthest removed from democratic ideas of any school system in existence. The exact uniformity of the schools is almost unbelievable. The minister of instruction, sitting in his office in Paris can tell at any moment just what fable of La Fontaine each child of a certain age throughout the whole of France is reciting. Teachers are not allowed any latitude at all. The result is to leave both teachers and scholars al most completely lacking in mental originality.-F. A. Vanderlip in Scrib-

Making Fire.

When it is considered how old the world's civilization is it seems surprising that man should have only so very recently learned how to make fire easily. The primitive flint and steel method is practically but of the last generation, and that does not appear so said: very far ahead of friction with wood. It is not astonishing, on the whole, that savages should commonly suppose that fire really exists in wood and stone since it is from these everyday materials that they secure a portion of Prometheus' precious theft from heaven.

Wagner's Shorn Locks.

Wagner, the composer, at one time became afflicted with headaches and determined to have his hair cut. H accordingly arranged with a barber to perform the operation on a certain day. That worthy resolved to make a good thing of it and informed all his cus tomers of Wagner's impending sacrifice. Most of them paid him a certain sum down in advance to make sure of a lock of the great musician's hair. To the barber's horror Mme. Wagner superintended the cutting and when it was over appropriated the whole of the coveted locks. The barber, in despair, confessed that he had sold them many times over, whereupon madam suggested that her butcher had hair ly, but Providence was very merciful ery much like Wagner's. And the story goes that that night half Dresoffice. When I returned a quarter of den slept with the butcher's hair under its pillow.

Historic Relic.

The Chesapeake, famous for her encounter with the British ship Shannon in the war of 1812, is still in existence. When she was captured by the British she was taken to England by her captor, Sir Philip Broke, and ome years later her timbers were sold. The purchaser was a miller in Wiskham, and when he pulled down his old mill he built a new one from the timbers of the Chesapeake. Many of these timbers still have the marks e of the Shannon's grapeshot, and in some places the shots are still to be seen deeply imbedded in the pitch pine. good hat," said the hatter, "runs over If the builder who made this ship enew that its timbers were being used rom his grave to right the wrong.

It was the first Sunday in their pretty new flat, and Mrs. G. determined to celebrate the joyous day with a dinner which would make her young husband think he had married not only "the sweetest girl in the world," but "the best cook." It was perfectly lovely to set the little round dining salad and dessert was not exactly a trying ordeal, but the roasting of the chicken made her a little nervous. Aft er succeeding, with the assistance of a large oilcloth book, in getting the fowl into the oven she sang from sheer relief. A little later, when the music had ceased and the silence in the kitchen became suspiciow. Mr. G opened the door. Kneeling down la fore the oven, with flushed face an tearful eyes, was Mrs. G.
